Kalitea was one of the most influential figures in the cult of Coram. Considered beautiful and intelligent, she was the second wife of Count Glibenese, an old man who had been sitting on the royal council of Temeria since King Medell had been young.<sup>[1]</sup>

Biography

It's unknown how Kalitea first discovered the cult of the Lion-Headed Spider. However, when she arrived in Vizima as the wife of Count Glibenese, she found the temple without issue. There, she was quickly accepted among the priests owing to her fondness of manipulation. In just a few years, she reached the highest degree of initiation and, thanks to her exceptional intelligence and cunning, eliminated the previous Thread Master, allowing her to take leadership of the cult's Vizima branch. Using this to her advantage, the cult aimed to consolidate the political position of her husband, though he was completely unaware of this support.

Despite being married and sincerely loving her husband, she was of the opinion that love and physical fidelity were not one and the same, and thus didn't view it as cheating by having many lovers on the side, who were all convinced they were the chosen one.

While her husband had two sons from a previous marriage, Ofulwin and Zoster, Kalitea appeared to have an amicable relationship with them, particularly Zoster, who'd run to her every time he caused trouble in the city. While she'd scold him
